ALASKA

Mental Health Trust Settlement Income

There are no statutes or regulations directly related to the training of individuals caring for and working with individuals with Alzheimer’s disease or dementia. Alaska’s mental health trust settlement income account statute provides that money in the trust shall be used for mental health programs, including programs for individuals with Alzheimer’s disease and other dementias, that include education services in consultation with providers.

Medicaid Waiver

Alaska has a Medicaid waiver that covers assisted living services using a tiered payment system.